

Abeona

Varied Sword-grass Brown

Tisipone abeona abeona

Wherever sharp-edged sedges grow (Ghania spp.), the sword-grass brown is likely to be seen. It flies slowly among the tall sedge, generally in eucalypt forest, but it also is common on hilltops, quite above the swampy valleys where the sedge grows.

This butterfly shows a remarkable variation in patterning from southern Queensland, around the coast to the Grampians in Victoria and across the border to south-eastern South Australia.
