

Banks

Banks' Brown

Heteronympha banksii

Bank's Brown is a late summer to Autumn butterfly, rather similar in general appearance to the earlier emerging Common Brown. They fly in grassy forest, generally quite close to the ground, but males will perch on fronds or branches in the sunlight, defending a territory from intruding males. The caterpillars eat grasses and also sedges.

Heteronympha banksii

