

Plinius

10 mm

A male Zebra Blue

Zebra Blue

Leptotes plinius

If you have a plumbago plant in your garden, from Sydney north you will have these butterflies there too. They are quite common in late summer. The two sexes are different above but the same below. The female has many white patches on the wings, unlike the male.

A female Zebra Blue thinking about laying an egg.

